ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The Deepest Map began as I was procrastinating editing my last book. I read an article in Smithsonian magazine titled “Why the First Complete Map of the Ocean Floor Is Stirring Controversial Waters,” and that 1,500-word piece by Kyle Frischkorn led to a few furiously creative hours, dreaming about what a book about mapping the seafloor might be. My first few interviews, with Vicki Ferrini at Lamont-Doherty Earth Observatory, Aileen Bohan at the Geological Survey Ireland, Jyotika Virmani and Carlie Wiener at the Schmidt Ocean Institute, and Luc Cuyvers at the Gallifrey Foundation, were incredibly insightful. An article I published in the Guardian soon afterward became the foundation of The Deepest Map—a huge thank-you to the Oceans editor, Chris Michael, for getting this project off the ground.

The story of two ships and their crews formed the backbone of The Deepest Map. First, a big thanks to the members of the Five Deeps Expedition, including Victor Vescovo, Alan Jamieson, Heather Stewart, Patrick Lahey, Rob McCallum, and, last but not least, Cassie Bongiovanni, who deserves my endless thanks for taking me on a crash course in ocean mapping over a couple of marathon Zoom calls. Next, I have to thank the crew aboard E/V Nautilus, in particular Nicole Raineault, who invited an untested landlubber on board for nine days and, most generously of all, shared her private cabin with me. What an angel. Thanks also to ocean mappers Renato Kane, Erin Heffron, and Anne Hartwell for talking, and sometimes taking, me through the ins and outs of mapping on board E/V Nautilus, and to Brooke Travis, Sarah Lott, Michael Hannaford, Virginia Edgcomb, Kris Krasnosky, D. J. Yousavich, Tim Burbank, Christopher Powers, and Megan Cook for all their hospitality and help out at sea.

My profuse thanks to everyone whose stories, knowledge, and insights appeared in these pages: Rob Beaman, David Sandwell, Mike Coffin, Hyun-Chul Han, Jamie McMichael-Phillips, Helen Snaith, Philip Steinberg, Kevin Mackay, Larry Mayer, Richard Jenkins, Brian Connon, Tim Kearns, Julien Desrochers, Annamaria DeAngelis, Robin Falconer, Mitsuyuki Unno, John Hall, Jennifer Jencks, Shirley Tagalik, Kukik Baker, Joe Karetak, Andrew “Balum” Muckpah, Aupaa Irkok, Brian Calder, Mathieu Rondeau, Denis Hains, Shawn Joy, Morgan Smith, Michael Faught, Barbara Clark, Patricia Esquete, Karoline Postel-Vinay, and Arlo Hemphill.

Of course, many more people provided information and direction behind the scenes: Rika Anderson, Yves Guillam, Victoria Weda, Alissa Johnson, Lisa Levin, Andrew Friedman, Jacqueline Mammerickx, Bruce Strickrott, Jon Copley, Oliver Steeds, Lisa Hynes, Nicole Trenholm, Alice Doyle, Dan Fornari, Craig Young, Josh Young, Tomer and Ofer Ketter, Kirill Novoselskiy, Evert Flier, Diana Krawczyk, Andrew Goodwillie, Bob Fisher, Chris German, Jessi Halligan, Laurie Barge, Charles Kohnen, Peter Girguis, Guy “Harley” Means, Nick Bentley, Ximena Smith, Lindsay Gee, Debora Hansen Kleist, Karl Zinglensen, Ulrich Schwarz-Schampera, Hali Felt, Michael Smith, Lucas Owljoot, Joe Shamee, Jacques John Mikiyungiak, and Jeff Kingston.

Many friends and colleagues read manuscripts and provided feedback at various stages: Ryan Hardy, Philip Steinberg, Ron Doel, Aletta Mondré, Starla Robinson, Rosemary Sullivan, and Helen Scales. My fellow board members at the San Diego Science Writing Association (Xochitl Rojas-Rocha, Monica May, Jared Whitlock, Ramin Skibba, Mario Aguilera, Patricia Fernandez, and Brittany Fair) cheered me on whenever I needed a boost. A special thanks to Michael Miller for shouldering part of my duties so I could meet my deadline in the final stages of writing.

Without the financial support of the Canada Council for the Arts, I could not have reported on Inuit hunters mapping their coastlines or on the ISA Council meetings in Jamaica. I am so grateful to be a citizen of a country that supports creators at all stages of their careers. I also received a generous grant from the Fund for Investigative Journalism, as well as legal advice from Jennifer Nelson and Celine Rohr at Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press and fact-checking assistance from Emily Latimer.

Thank you to my agent, Suzy Evans, who believed in this book from the beginning and who then went out and found me incredible editors, Karen Rinaldi and Rachel Kambury at Harper Wave and Alan Sheppard at Goose Lane Editions.

Finally, I owe heartfelt thanks to my friends and family for supporting my work, especially my husband, who listened to me talk “shop” over dinner, and who read the manuscript and double-checked all my calculations because math scares me. I love you.
