

The Lost Americans

---

A NOVEL

---

Christopher Bollen

HARPER

An Imprint of HarperCollins Publishers

This is a work of fiction. Names, characters, places, and incidents are products of the author's imagination or are used fictitiously and are not to be construed as real. Any resemblance to actual events, locales, organizations, or persons, living or dead, is entirely coincidental.

THE LOST AMERICANS. Copyright © 2023 by Christopher Bollen. All rights reserved. Printed in the United States of America. No part of this book may be used or reproduced in any manner whatsoever without written permission except in the case of brief quotations embodied in critical articles and reviews. For information, address HarperCollins Publishers, 195 Broadway, New York, NY 10007.

HarperCollins books may be purchased for educational, business, or sales promotional use. For information, please email the Special Markets Department at SPsales@harpercollins.com.

FIRST EDITION

The lines from "Trying to Talk with a Man," copyright © 2016 by the Adrienne Rich Literary Trust. Copyright © 1973 by W. W. Norton & Company, Inc., from Collected Poems: 1950-2012 by Adrienne Rich. Used by permission of W. W. Norton & Company, Inc.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication
Data has been applied for.

ISBN 978-0-06-322442-1

ScoutAutomatedPrintCode

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

---

This novel owes a debt to the Egyptians—friends, acquaintances, friends of friends, and kind strangers—who spoke with me about their experiences, thereby enriching a story that I otherwise would never have been able to tell. In what I only hope can be chalked up to an abundance of writerly paranoia, I’ve decided not to name them here in the event of any repercussions. But I thank them dearly for their openness, honesty, and trust. It will come as no surprise to readers of this book that several of those conversations dealt with the current government’s persecution of the LGBTQ+ community. The events in this novel are fictional. The underlying problems in the United States, in Egypt, and all over the warring world are not. In choosing to set this imperfect vehicle of a novel in Egypt, I do so with a deep respect and tremendous love for the country, and also with a concerned eye for its present and future.

For a book that covers such diverse topics as international arms, overseas autopsies, and even piano tuning, I was lucky to count on the expertise of many sources. Among those who provided information or pointed me toward its discovery are Michael Baden, Bruce Newsome, Jack Jarmon, Noah Mandell, an unnamed operator from the U.S. State Department who humored me on if/then questions for an hour,, Robert Abrams, Dora Fung, Matthew King, Catherine Chester, and Jeremy Tamanini. The early drafts of this novel were written in the Berkshires during the pandemic, in the New Marlborough—a djacent town of Sandisfield. B ut m uch o f t he r ewriting a nd e diting w as c ompleted during my stay as the writer in residence on Venice's island of San Servolo for Ca'Foscari's Waterlines Project and at a residency at Cité internationale des arts in Paris. I want to thank both of these magnificent institutions for giving me a room and a desk.

Acknowledgments

Never could I finish a novel without my trusted first reader, dear friend, and agent Bill Clegg, who always knows how to make the words matter more. Thanks too to Marion Duvert, Simon Toop, Nik Wesson, and everyone at the Bill Clegg Agency. I'm in debt to two editors of enormous talent who steered this book to its final form: the phenomenal Jennifer Barth, who found the story amid the tumult and helped me shape it, and the brilliant Millicent Bennett, who located the holes and missing heartbeats. Thank you to the finest publisher I know, Jonathan Burnham, for his support and friendship, to Liz Velez, Miranda Ottewell, and everyone at Harper for making me feel like part of the family. Special thanks to Daniela Gugliemino, and to Philippe Robinet, Charlotte LeFevre, and Michael McCaughley, and to Michael Cendejas and Lynn Pleshette.

What a hellish year it was when I wrote this novel. I want to thank my friends for seeing me through it: among the many I owe dearly, Patrik Ervell, Wade Guyton, T. Cole Rachel, Thomas Alexander, Alexander Hertling, Zadie Smith, T. J. Wilcox, James

Acknowledgments

Haslam, Edmund White, Kelly Brant, Scott Rothkopf, Jack McCullough, Lazaro Hernandez, Joseph Logan, Stephanie LaCava, Lauren Tabach Bank, Olympia Scarry, Adam Kimmel, Mina and Monroe, David Totah, Tiffany Gassouk, Emily Supinger, Suzanne Ackerman, Carolyn Bane, and my family back in Cincinnati.

Finally, this book is partly dedicated to the memories of three people who, in vastly different ways, inspired this novel. I never met them, but their lives and ends weighed on me. Sarah Hegazi, Giulio Regeni, and Christopher Cramer. Thank you, too, to the publication, Mada Masr, for its brave reporting that kept me close to Egypt.