Acknowledgements

First and foremost I am very grateful to Rachele Mussolini and Gloria Ciano, and to Emma Moriconi, co-author with Edda Negri Mussolini of a family memoir, who all talked to me about the Mussolini and Ciano families. Gloria Ciano's help in particular was invaluable.

I would also like warmly to thank Bill Savadove who, when I was unable to get to Shanghai, provided me with crucial research and information about the city in the 1930s, and helped me track down elusive sources. In Germany, Gerd Stratmann and Ingrid von Rosenberg were as always enormously helpful in every way. Guillermo Gil helped me with Spanish translations. I thank them all very much.

My thanks go to Jacqueline de Chollet, for her permission to quote from her unpublished memoir; Benedetta Polk, for her permission to quote from the papers of her father, Daniele Varè; the di Robilant family, for allowing me to quote from their grandmother's unpublished memoir.

The following people all helped me during the course of my research and I want to thank them: Giovanni Aldobrandini, Giuseppe Aprea, Catherine Bailey, Ludina Barzini, Peter Baring, Luciana Castellina, Mauro Canali, the late Nicola Caracciolo, Orsina Cerulli, Anna Chimenti, Aimee Corsini, Benedetta Craveri, Jonathon Dora Pamphilj, Santa Ercolani, Paul French, Gelasio Gaetani d'Aragona, Jon Halliday, Luigi Lembo, John Moorehead, David Macfadyen, Andrea di Robilant, Filippo di Robilant, Laudomia Pucci, Principe Ruspoli, Marcello Sorgi, Inigo Thomas.

Because of Covid restrictions, access to libraries and archives was extremely limited. I am therefore especially grateful for the help I received from the following people and institutions, without whom I would not have been able to complete this book: Beatrice di Pinto, Marina Turchetti and Daniela Loyola and the Archivio Nazionale dello Stato, Rome; Ignazio Pintus and the Archivio Cantonale of Bellinzona, Ticino; Paola Busonero and the Ministero degli Affari Esteri, Rome; Desirée di Stefano and the Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale di Roma; Carmelina Fiorentino and the Biblioteca del Centro Caprese Ignazio Cerio; Alan Brown and the Bodleian, Oxford; the staff of the Biblioteca Minerva del Senato, Rome; the National Archives, London; the British Library, London; the Swiss Federal Archives, Berne; the Archives of RAI, Rome; the Biblioteca della Camera, Rome; the Biblioteca di Storia Moderna e Contemporanea, Rome.

I paid several visits to the Villa Carpena, the Mussolini family home at Forlì, now a museum, and would like to thank its director, Adele Grana, for all her help.

Richard Bosworth and Anne Chisholm kindly read the book in manuscript and I am extremely grateful to them. I would also like to thank my travelling companions during my research: Miles Morland, Michela Wrong, Guy Slater, Patricia Williams.

All the translations in the book are my own.

As ever, my warmest thanks go to my editors, Poppy Hampson, Jennifer Barth, Pamela Murray, Mary Gaule and Greg Clowes; to my very kind picture editor, Jo Evans, and copy-editor, Alison Tulett; and to my wonderful agent, Clare Alexander.

SELECTED SOURCES

The literature on Mussolini, his family and the Fascist years is vast and the Archivio Centrale dello Stato (ACS) in Rome has an enormous holding on the dictator and Fascism generally; in particular the Segreteria particolare del Duce carteggio riservato and ordinario, Ministero dell'Interno; Ministero della Cultura Popolare. The following are the historians whose works have been most consulted in this book: R.J.B. Bosworth; Mauro Canali; F. W. Deakin; Christopher Duggan; Renzo De Felice; Mimmo Franzinelli; Giordano Bruno Guerri; Christopher Hibbert; Denis Mack Smith; Ray Moseley; Arrigo Petacco; Antonio Spinosa; Eugenio Di Rienzo. The Mussolinis themselves were prolific writers. Books by Mussolini himself, his wife Rachele, his sons Vittorio and Romano, his granddaughters Rachele and Edda, all feature largely, as do, of course, the memoirs of Edda herself. Mussolini's complete works are to be found in thirty-six volumes in Opera Omnia (eds E. and D. Susmel) published between 1951 and 1962.
